Apart from the deep interest taken in the ture of the Congo State, Great Britain has interest of another kind in the negotiation future of the Ungo State. Great Britain has an interest of another kind in the negotiarious for the transfer of the State from Leopold II, to the Kingdom fellegium. It concerns the Lado Enclave. The territory by which the Congo State has at present an outlet on the Nile. In the draft Act of Annexation no reference is made to the Lado Enclave, and among international jurista uncertainty prevails as to the legal status of the enclave; and the legal status of the enclave; and the legal position, as a correspondent in the "Pall Mall Gazette points ont, that accounts for the omission and any mention of Lado in the projected tracts. The fact is that the enclave is leased by Great Britain to King Leopold personsily, and not to the Congo State. It is is leased by Great Britain to King Leopold personsily, and out to the Congo State. It is, moreover, leased to his Majosty in his capacity of "Sovereign of the Independent State of the Congo," and the lease is to run "during his reign." Within six months of the termination of his reign the enclare is to be handed over to the Sudanese Government. That is its ulti-

of his reign the enclave is to be handed over to the Sudanese Government. That is it sultimate desiriny, shout which there is no question. But the point has arisen, and is taken seriously by such an aminent authority on all matters effecting the Congo as M. A. J. Wanders, whether the King's reign will not end with the act of transference of the Congo State to Belgium The phrase "during his rings might have been used merely as a suphemism for "during his life, but if Leopold II, were to ablinate his reign would clearly come to an end, and the enclave would have to be handed over to the Sudan Government Equally, it is held, if the Congo State be unused by Belgium Leopold II, reases to regin as "Norweign of the Independence of the Congo." It would, therefore, seem that in that event either he would nominue to hold the enclave as a personal fief, in vitrue of the terms of the losser from threat Britain, or else that within six months of the assumption of Belgian rule on the Cingo the enclave would have to be handed over to the Sudan Government. Already it is suggested that his Majesty's future title swill be "Roi dee Belgieset Seigneur Idealo". Leopold II laboured band for many years to secure an outlet on the Nila, and it was with bitternoss and regret that in May, 1906, he concluded the agreement abandoning the Bahrel Ghazal, and limiting his interest in the Lado Ecolave. He was then, however, succeeding a referred of the lease. the heart-elvinazal, and timiting his interest in the Lado Ecolave. He was then, however, successful in getting a renewal of the lease in perpetuity of a strip of territory twenty-five kilometres fitteen and a half miles broad, connecting the Congo State with the western The Egyptian Gazette connecting the Longo State with the western shore of Albert Nyanza and including the port of Mahagi. This mingr lease is to the Congo State, and would, therefore, be taken over by Belgium. But though it gives accessed a kind to the Nile, there are impassible rapids between it and the pavigable watern of the Upper Nile.
